MESSAGE FROM THE EDITOR

OUR SCHOOLS OUR PARKS

There are 27.7 square miles of Manchester. It's been this size for generations and will be for generations more. We are blessed with beautiful parks, historic buildings, cherished recreational facilities, verdant fields and woods. However, like any properties or possessions, these need to be maintained, taken care of, occasionally refurbished and renovated. That's what this issue is about.

This summer issue of "Better Manchester Magazine" is another collaborative effort, produced in partnership by the town's Department of Leisure, Family and Recreation, and the Manchester Public School's Office of Family and Community Partnership.

It's especially appropriate that we team up on this issue because the content itself represents the spaces and places we share. The opposite page includes icons depicting many of the areas of action as our town begins an ambitious campaign to renovate, repurpose and reinvest in our parks, trails, schools and other facilities that are crucial parts of our infrastructure.

These shared assets and the work that will be going on this summer and beyond are an investment, designed to meet our community's needs for now and for many years into the future.

Here's an overview of what's inside this issue:

OUR SCHOOLS

A decade ago the Cheney Building on School Street was shuttered and slated for demolition. This summer, though, the building will again be busy, filled with workers giving it a facelift in preparation for it coming back online in 2017—the eventual home of all of the town's fifth-graders.

Renovation of the Cheney Building is a first and critical step in a 10-year plan that will affect all of our elementary schools.

The Cheney project is meaningful for other reasons, too, as it represents another phase in preserving the legacy of Education Square. For more than a century, tens of thousands of Manchester students have been educated in buildings at the base of Main Street—and with the Cheney Building soon to be part of the Bennet campus, those numbers will further multiply.

The story of our school renovation process is, in many ways, a history lesson—and it begins on Page 4.

OUR PARKS

A block south of Education Square is Charter Oak Park, which itself has a fascinating history. The park was threatened 60 years ago when Route 384 was built, and with it an interchange at Exit 3 that threatened to destroy recreational facilities serving our community.

The story of how our town responded is in this issue, and goes on to detail renovations taking place at Charter Oak Park and elsewhere in town this summer.

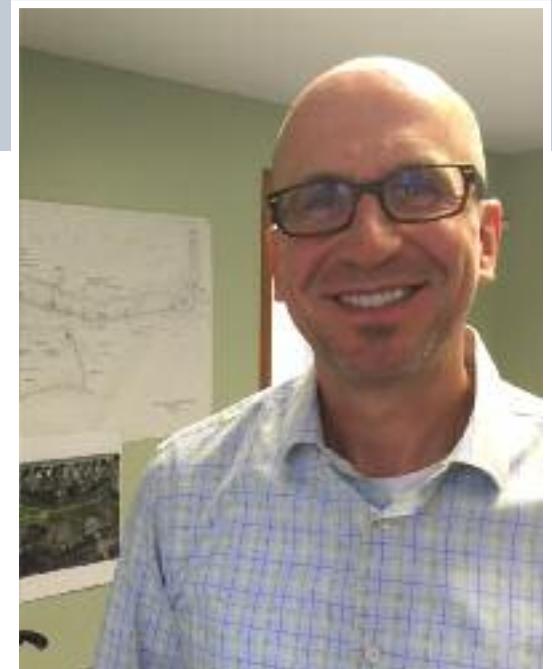

The facelift at Charter Oak includes a more attractive entrance, better parking, and more.

Meanwhile, work is continuing at Center Springs Park, an under-appreciated jewel in the center of town. Improvements in the works there include creation of a pedestrian entrance from Broad Street and dredging the pond to increase water quality.

Residents throughout town also will benefit from improvements and extensions to the trail system in town, which bicyclists and others are using with increasing frequency. The story of our parks renaissance begins on Page 7.

10 Years After Being Slated For Demolition, Cheney Building Is At Center of Ambitious Infrastructure Plan

When the Cheney Building—that blocky brick behemoth that has been shuttered for the past 10 years—is renovated and back on line, it will be natural to look excitedly to the future.

After all, the building will have 23 state-of-the-art classrooms equipped to meet the needs of 21st Century fifth-grade learners. It will retain its historic facade, part of a design plan courtesy of Tai Soo Kim Partners, the award-winning firm that has an impressive portfolio spanning three continents. And a stylish covered walkway over School Street will connect the Cheney Building with Bennet Academy.

“The Cheney Building is a critical piece of our long-overdue, comprehensive plan to ensure that all of the students in our town have access to top-flight education facilities,” said Superintendent Matt Geary. “This is about buildings, yes, but it’s really about students and learning—and as we look forward it’s exciting to know that we are going to have high-quality, equitable facilities for all students for the next generation and beyond.”

Work on the Cheney Building has just begun and is scheduled to be complete when school opens in fall 2017, triggering a series of moves. Waddell Elementary will be renovated next as a K-4 school, followed by Verplanck, Bowers, Keeney, Buckley and Martin. Residents have not yet approved funding for all of the elementary work, but if voters give their consent and all goes as planned, by the year 2025 there will be closure to challenges that have troubled the town since, oh, the mid- 1990s.

“We’ve made great progress, and we have a long way to go,” Christopher Pattacini, chairman of the school board said. “Our students deserve the best facilities we can afford. The groundbreaking on the Cheney Building project ensures that we are well on our way to providing modern school facilities for all our elementary students.”

So, yes, the Cheney project has people excited about what’s ahead. But others are equally excited as they look back.

Ten years ago—in January 2006—the board of directors agreed to tear down the Cheney building as well as the adjacent School Street firehouse, and a town boiler plant to make way for 1.3 acres of green space, half a soccer field, and parking on the cramped Bennet complex, which by then was slated to undergo a $37.1 million renovation project to create a sixth-grade academy.

Members of the Cheney Brothers National Historic District Commission objected and, ultimately, plans changed and the town purchased and razed properties to the east of Bennet for parking and field space.

Dave Smith, curator of the Manchester Historical Society, is among those pleased that the Cheney Building was saved and will have a new life while retaining its original purpose.

“Education Square,” said Smith, “is back to being Education Square again—a point of pride in this town.”

Education Square

For more than 100 years, the block bounded by Main, School, Wells and Vine has been an educational epicenter of Manchester.

Volumes have been written about “Education Square,” as it is known, but here’s a short version:

The ‘original’ Manchester High (now the site of senior apartments) opened in 1904.

Across the street—right on School Street, naturally, where Bennet is now -- stood the Ninth District School, which for years had served the growing town.

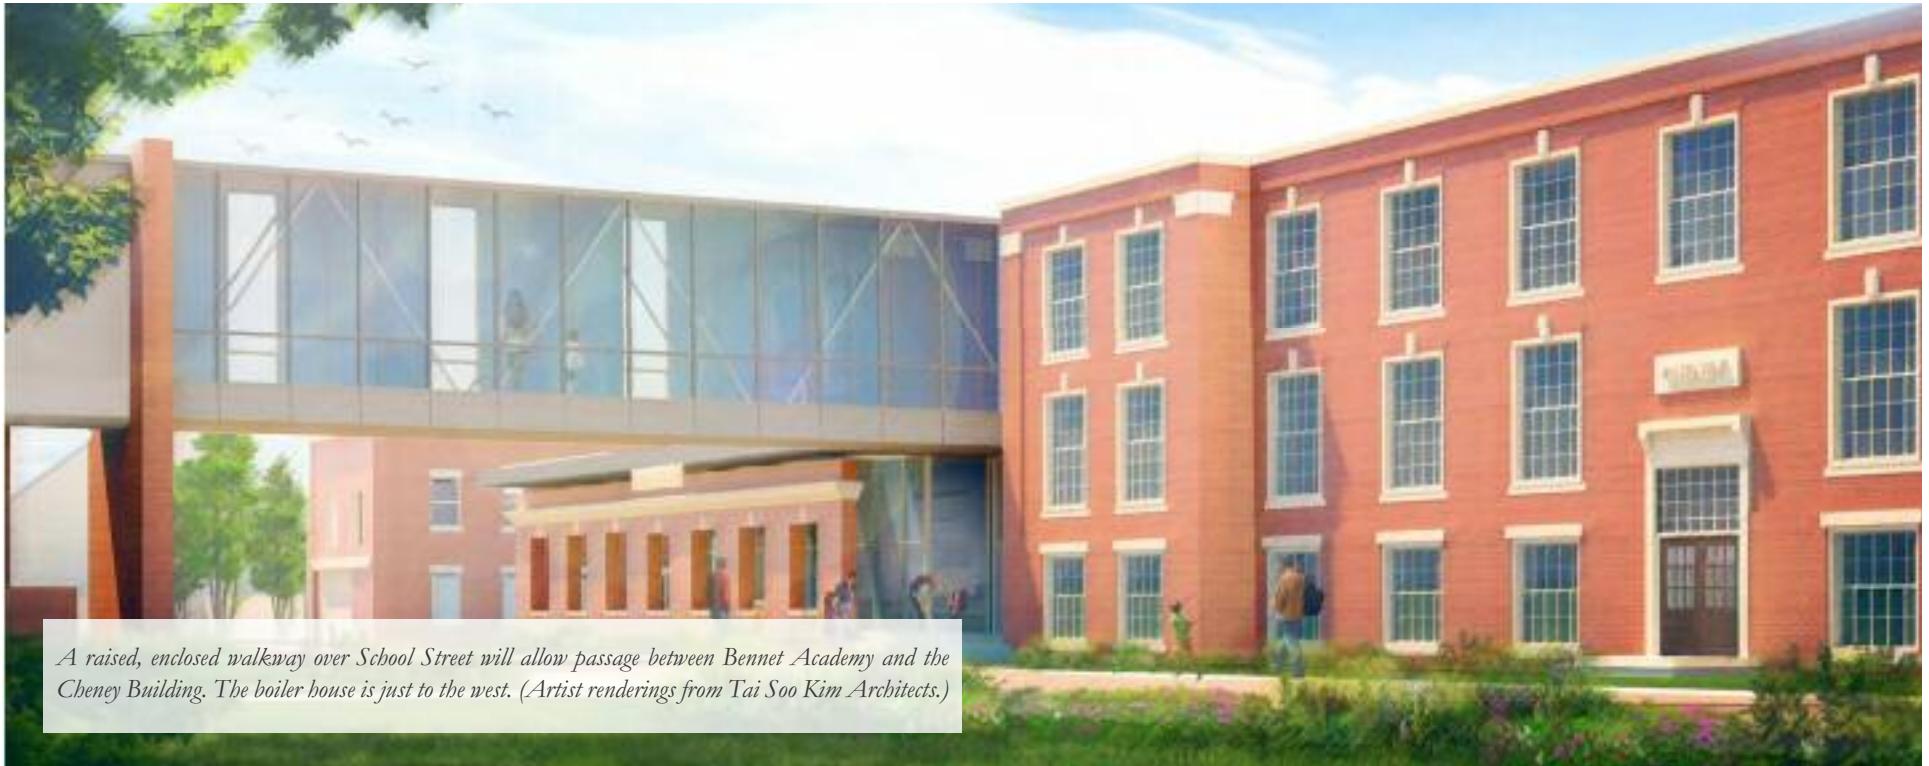

But in 1913 the Ninth District School burned down. (Thankfully none of the 1100 students in attendance that day died, in part because of heroes including then-teacher Elisabeth Bennet.)

Within a year, and on that same block, the Cheney family was building the Barnard, Franklin and Recreation buildings, which (along with the Cone building, built in 1975) now form Bennet Academy.

The Cheney Trade School building opened on the north side of School Street in 1926—then serving as a state trade school. When Howell Cheney Technical High School—the one on West Middle Turnpike—opened in 1962, the Cheney Trade School building became part of the Bennet Junior High (later Middle School) campus.

“Thousands of students have been educated in Education Square,” Smith said. “But it almost came to an end.”

OUR COMMUNITY OUR SCHOOLS

A raised, enclosed walkway over School Street will allow passage between Bennet Academy and the Cheney Building. The boiler house is just to the west. (Artist renderings from Tai Soo Kim Architects.)

He's referring to the discussions that gained traction in the mid-1990s, when attention turned to the aging school infrastructure. Manchester's population had grown rapidly through the century and while schools were regularly being built they were not well-maintained, which created a crisis of sorts that came to a head in the mid-1990s.

Committees were formed to assess aging school infrastructure and develop plans to fix things -- and Bennet by then was arguably the most obvious albatross.

The first of the truly big-tickets modernization plans went before voters in 1999, calling for an overhaul of the then 10 elementary schools for $110 million. It was rejected with many residents concerned because the plan didn't address significant problems at the grade 6-12 schools (including Bennet, which by then literally had tiles falling from some ceilings).

In 2002 came a new plan seeking $140 million to build a new high school on Wetherell Street, which would then have allowed the middle-schoolers to move to the current high school site, taking Bennet offline. That plan, too, was defeated.

More debate ensued for the next few years, with the Bennet campus presenting a quandary. Tear some or all of it all down? Turn it into a library? Or a regional bus depot? Opinions were varied. Eventually, though, Bennet was shut down and refurbished, reopening in 2007 as a sixth-grade academy.

Finally, in 2014, voters approved spending another $84.2 million as part of next phase that includes restoring the Cheney Building into a grade 5 school.

Diane Sheehan-Burns, who oversees humanities instruction in the district, said she is thrilled that recent Bennet students have had the special opportunity to go to school in thoroughly modernized buildings that are themselves part of Manchester's rich history.

"The Cheney family built these," said Sheehan-Burns, herself a Manchester resident. "There's an aura about these facilities—but they are, and in the case of the Cheney Building will be—state-of-the-art. That's an amazing combination."

Education Today

Education Square hasn't moved, but education itself has come a long way in the past century, and especially the past decade or so.

"Learning today has to be personalized and student-centered," said Amy Radikas, Assistant Superintendent for Curriculum & Instruction. "We want our facilities to reflect that so that all of our students will have every opportunity for success."

Technology is an integral part of a 21st century education, especially when it is designed to foster collaborative learning and allow for students to experience the world beyond their neighborhood. As such, technology for the Cheney Building will allow for flexible classroom arrangements while ensuring that all students have access to the technology they need to succeed in the future.

OUR COMMUNITY OUR SCHOOLS

As with any such project, decisions about “FF&E” (furniture, fixtures and equipment) are still unfolding. The district has identified creativity, collaboration, courage and excellence for all as key tenets, and Geary said decisions about everything, even furniture, are made with those factors in mind.

For example, schools throughout town already have been replacing worn desks (which are almost always rectangular) with “collaborative learning furniture” -- notably desks with a trapezoidal shape. The reason is rectangular desktops can't create closed or tight groups for students to face one another while engaged in collaborative learning.

And are desks even necessary? In one classroom at Robertson Elementary, most students are content with “lap desks”—essentially trays on which they can move around and do work, sometimes sitting on “exercise-ball-chairs,” which are also becoming quite popular.

Manchester is somewhat limited as it modernizes its schools because its buildings are being renovated, not designed from scratch, meaning each building's footprint will remain essentially the same.

Still, there are lots of creative possibilities that are being considered—some more seriously than others.

In February, a group that included teachers, administrators, parents and others met with architects from Tai Soo Kim Partners to begin brainstorming changes that will be made when Waddell Elementary is renovated.

(Waddell is scheduled to move all of its students into the Cheney Building starting in fall 2017, while its building is being renovated. Only after Waddell is finished—likely early in 2019—will fifth-graders from throughout town inhabit the Cheney Building.)

As Waddell's planning began, Geary said he wanted any and all good ideas to be considered, no matter how radical they may seem.

And certainly there are examples from throughout the country that are redefining what schools look like.

For instance, a K-8 school in Royal Palm Beach, Florida has an indoor slide that students can use to get from the second floor to the first. Officials there say kids love it and use it appropriately—and that the slide serves as a powerful and inspiring example for students who are being encouraged to be creative and take intellectual risks.

Waddell Elementary is next in line—after the Cheney Building—for renovations as part of a 10-year plan that will affect elementary students throughout town. The entire Waddell community (K to 5) will actually be the first to move into the Cheney Building when it opens in fall 2017; Waddell will stay for a year and a half as its building is renovated.

Another example: Some schools are designing their library using a treehouse motif, to create a cozy ambience more conducive to reading.

Geary said he knows that discussions of slides and treehouses may sound frivolous, but he notes that kids need to like coming to school, that they need to be comfortable and safe and motivated.

“All of this is connected,” he said. “Our buildings, our instruction, the relationships that our staff members have with students and families. There are a lot of pieces and our goal is that every decision we make is based on what's best for kids, so that all of our students will graduate prepared for college or the military or the workforce as life-long learners and responsible members of society.”

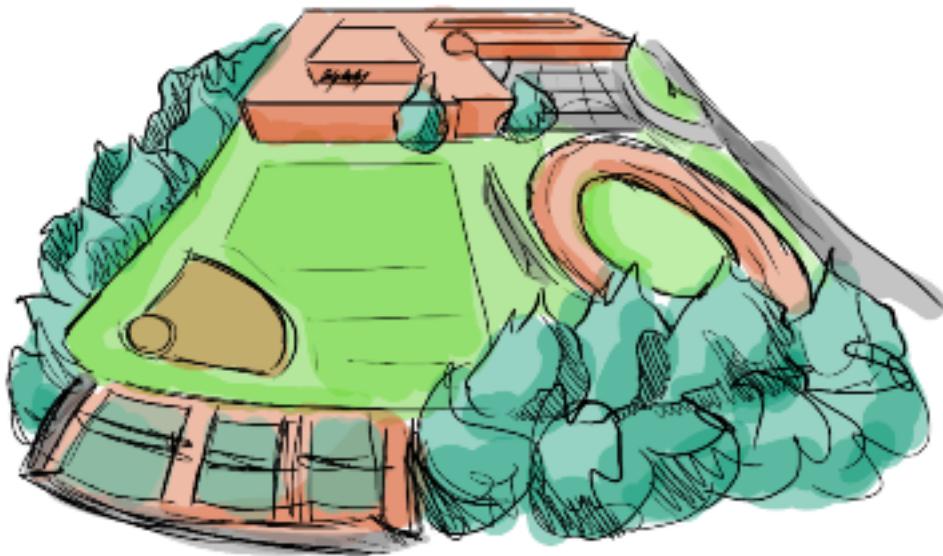

He added that while the building modernization project that will unfold over the next decade is fundamentally about what's best for students—it was designed with a range of other critical factors in mind.

Specifically, when all of the buildings are finished, the plan will have:

- Ensured equity, as all students will have comparable and appropriate facilities and resources.
- Maintained class sizes within the range of 17-22 students.
- Complied with state laws on racial balance.
- Maximized the use of state school construction grants.
- Met all state standards for lighting, acoustics, air quality and security.
- Created flexibility to adjust to district-wide enrollment changes.

“This 10-year plan that starts with the work at the Cheney Building is a good one,” Geary said. “And it's nice to know that we have a solid, comprehensive plan for our buildings because we can now give more attention to what is most important—our students.”

Manchester High School is getting a new artificial turf football/soccer field as part of $3 million of work that includes a new track as well as renovations to the boys' and girls' locker rooms. The synthetic turf is projected to have a life expectancy of 12 to 15 years, while the track should last about 20 years.

OUR COMMUNITY OUR PARKS

In the sixties, Manchester earned a mention of Time Magazine for Charter Oak Park's innovative approach to green space preservation. This summer's renovation will update the park for a new generation of Manchester families.

Rediscover & Connect

Investment in Center Springs, Charter Oak Parks and Trail System Spurs Recreational Renaissance

In 1967, Manchester residents learned that a proposed highway interchange would consume 50 acres of recreational green space at the center of town, including three baseball fields, a playground, and a football field.

Cause for concern? Definitely. But local officials came up with a creative, constructive plan preserving so much recreational space that four years later the town was featured in Time Magazine for its innovative compromise with the highway developers.

In “The Overlooked Cloverleaf,” the magazine touted Manchester’s plan to preserve recreational space within the network of highway ramps in what is now Charter Oak Park. The $263,275 the Town received in payment for the interchange was used to create what Time called an “interchange city” with a recreation center, ice skating rink, basketball courts, a playground, all connected to fields through a pedestrian underpass.

A half century later, Manchester is still investing in its parks and open space—and still seeking smart strategies to improve its parks and trails in a town that’s now fully developed, with precious little unclaimed space.

This summer, the town has three especially ambitious projects—the continued revitalization of Center Springs Park, an extension of Manchester’s multi-use trail system), and an overhaul of the overhaul of the park at the “overlook cloverleaf”—Charter Oak.

Charter Oak

According to Mark Carlino, who recently left his position as Director of Public Works after 20 years of service to the town of Manchester for a position at Connecticut Department of Transportation, the Park is getting a facelift this summer. Improvements include a more welcoming entryway to the park at the south end of Spruce Street and a restructured parking lot with easier access to sidewalks and to the pedestrian underpass.

Also in the plans: an updated recreation facility with revamped restrooms, including a family restroom with changing station; reconstructed basketball and tennis courts; an updated playscape; and the addition of a second musical playscape, outfitted with nine full-size playable instruments.

Manchester Parks and Recreation Facilities Manager Rob Topliff notes that the pedestrian walkway is now part of the East Coast Greenway Trail, a 2500 multi-use trail running all the way from Maine to Florida. The park portion of the trail runs alongside Hop Brook. Recent improvements including updated fencing and strategic brush clearing have turned the underpass portion from a “dark tunnel” to an “urban nature walk.”

According Director of Leisure, Family and Recreation Chris Silver, the work in Charter Oak represents just a portion of what he calls “a Park Renaissance” throughout Manchester: “Our goal is really to prepare our parks and recreational facilities for the next generation of Manchester families.”

OUR COMMUNITY OUR PARKS

Center Springs

“Right now, we have two huge generations—the Baby Boomers and the Millennials—and they have one thing in common: They are relocating to walkable communities with recreational spaces—including parks and trails—and amenities,” says Mark Pellegrini, the Town of Manchester’s Director of Planning and Economic Development.

Particularly attractive are recreational spaces within walking distance to centrally located core neighborhoods. In Manchester, three parks fit this description: Charter Oak on the East Side; Center Park next to the library; and, just a little off Main Street, Center Springs Park.

Called an “undiscovered gem” by the Manchester Land Trust and “world-class” by real estate advisory firm LiveWorkLearnPlay, Center Springs is accessible to both Broad Street and Main Street by foot. The centrally-located park is home to Center Springs Pond, a multi-use loop trail, and—a new addition as of last fall—a nine-hole frisbee golf course.

In the 1920’s Bigelow Brook was dammed up to create a six acre pond. By the 1930’s, ice skaters and fishermen were flocking to Center Springs Pond and the 55 acre park surrounding it. Through the forties, fifties, and sixties, Center Springs continued to attract families and residents looking for a little bit of nature in the heart of the city.

However, throughout the seventies and eighties upstream road-sanding and construction began to affect the water quality of the pond. Although the park continued to attract sleds and ice skaters, it’s thick tree growth and growing presence on the police report earned it an increasingly negative reputation.

According to Rob Topliff, that’s a reputation that’s beginning to change.

“It really all starts with perception,” explains Topliff, who has been working in the Recreation field for eighteen years. Over the past fall and winter, the town thinned trees throughout the park and cleared acres of underbrush in efforts to create clear lines of sight and improve the park’s safety. According to Topliff, “When people come out to the park now for events or to play frisbee golf, they say this isn’t the park they remember from ten years ago. It has a trail for pushing strollers and riding bikes, a pier for fishing, fields and courts for programmed recreation, and a playground just up the hill from the main lodge. Now it’s just a matter of getting people to come check it out.”

About a year ago, Tom Deffenbaugh of Summit Studios,

A mecca for winter sports in the 1920s, Center Springs Park’s new disc golf course is drawing a new generation of park-goers to this downtown destination. (Photographs from Manchester Historical Society).

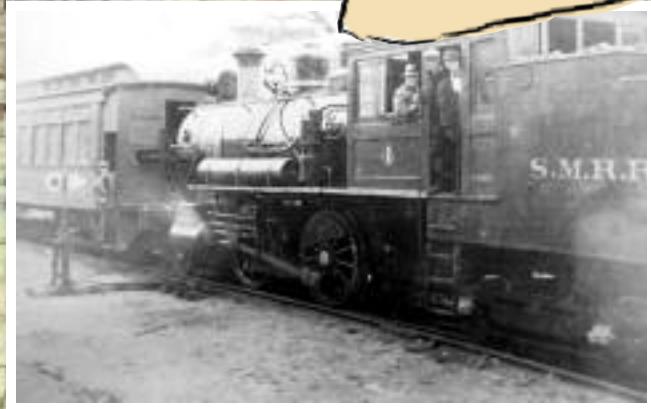

founded the grassroots Friends of Center Springs Park with the goal of drawing more visitors to experience the park through events such as the Rock in the Park summer concert series. He was quoted in the last issue of Better Manchester Magazine as saying: “This is a park we can all share and enjoy as a place of exploration...a place where we can run, ride our bikes, or gather together. My vision is for Center Springs Park to be everybody’s backyard, and for everybody to be able to enjoy it.”

Over the past two years, the town has rebuilt the culvert system under Edgerton Street that feeds Bigelow Brook into Center Springs Pond. The street itself, which had been closed in this area since 2009 due to safety concerns, was rebuilt and re-opened in May 2015. The town continues to make improvements to the park. Plans for the future include the creation of a pedestrian entrance from Broad Street; the completion of a longer, foot-only loop trail; the dredging of the pond to increase water quality; increased visibility of features such as the playground just up the hill from the lodge; and the improvement of a scenic overlook.

And, then of course, there’s the other scenic overlook from the new bike-ped footbridge that completes the Cheney Rail Trail and provides a vantage to take in all 55 acres of recreational space at a single glance.

OUR COMMUNITY OUR PARKS

The Cheney Brothers built the South Manchester Railroad (pictured top and right) for transporting textiles back when Manchester was known as “Silk City.” A portion of the railway bed, the historic Cheney Rail Trail, has been converted to a multi-use trail for bike and pedestrian transportation. The architectural rendering (below) illustrates the pedestrian bridge which will comprise a portion of the Charter Oak Greenway extension.

Manchester Trails

“If you imagine our trail system as the spokes of the wheel, Center Springs Park is the hub.” Mark Carlino is explaining the Cheney Rail Trails role in connecting to additional recreational opportunities to the north and south of the park. The north end of the trail ends in the Farr’s parking lot, just a few blocks from the Union Pond Park and a mile from the Manchester terminus of the Hop River Trail. The south end of the trail ends at Hartford Road, just to the northeast of the Prospect Street entrance to the Charter Oak Greenway and to the northwest of Charter Oak Park’s connection to the greenway.

The Charter Oak Greenway is a 9.8 mile multi-use trail that connects Forbes Street in East Hartford to Porter Street in Bolton by way of Charter Oak Park (and the pedestrian underpass mentioned above). This spring, the Connecticut Department of Transportation broke ground on a $6.8 million dollar expansion project which will continue the trail 2.75 miles past Case Mountain and through Manchester’s water department land, ending at Bolton Notch State Park.

This expansion, funded by a combination of state and federal funds, will create a crucial connection between two portions of the East Coast Greenway Trail, a 200-mile non-motorized interstate connecting Maine to Florida. It will also allow hikers and cyclists to connect to the Hop River Trail through Bolton Notch, closing the 18-mile circuit which, for Topliff, begins and ends at Center Springs Park.

“You can start out in Manchester and take an 18-mile loop through Charter Oak Park, past Case Mountain, through Bolton Notch to Valley Falls Park, across Vernon, then back to the North End of Manchester and the Cheney Rail Trail, and end up back at the bridge overlooking Charter Oak Park.” The creation of and improvements to the Cheney Rail Trail and the East Coast Greenway, as well as plans for sprucing up the Colonial Drive entrance to the Hop River Trail, from Topliff’s perspective, all serve a broader goal: positioning Manchester as a hub for wellness-related recreational activities.

Counting the Cost

The investments Manchester has been making in its recreational spaces is not insignificant:

- Charter Oak Park’s summer improvements will cost $1,250,000.
- Center Springs improvements (including the repair of Edgerton Street, the replacement of the culvert system, and the new pedestrian bridge) totalled $1,697,893.
- The Manchester-Bolton East Coast Greenway expansion project will total $6.8 million in state and federal funds.

It’s an investment in what Mark Pellegrini calls “anchors for placemaking”—that is, those shared spaces that provide a sense of community. The dividends reaped are not just social and environmental but also economic. According to the Urban Land Institute, outdoor recreational infrastructure and “trail-oriented development” can attract new development and increase property values.

Silver speaks of the more tangible benefits. Parks and trails are places to exercise, to gather, to play, to connect with nature. “Manchester is full of beautiful spaces just waiting for Manchester families to rediscover. We’re renewing our parks and trails so that they can be enjoyed for generations to come.”

MANCHESTER REVALUATION

In accordance with Connecticut General Statutes, the Town of Manchester is conducting a real property revaluation as required for the Grand List of October 1, 2016. This revaluation will correspond to the tax bills that will be due beginning in July 2017.

Vision Government Solutions Inc. ("Vision") is assisting the Town in this revaluation. Vision also performed Manchester's revaluations in 2000, 2006 and 2011. Vision is an industry leader, having been in business for over 30 years and performed hundreds of revaluations in Connecticut.

The 2016 revaluation does not require that every property be physically visited as was done in 2011. However, revaluation staff will be visiting Manchester properties that sell to a new owner between April 1, 2015 and October 1, 2016 as well as other properties where information needs to be updated. All Vision representatives' vehicles will be registered with the police department and be clearly marked. Each data collector will have written documentation from the town and they will be wearing an identification badge. Data collectors generally work between the hours of 8 a.m. and 7 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

The market analysis and valuation phases of this project will occur in October. Once the market analysis and valuation phases of this revaluation are completed, in November 2016, property owners will receive a notice of their new assessment. At that time, taxpayers will be invited to participate in an informal hearing if they wish to review their new assessment. The informal hearing, conducted by Vision representatives, is the first step in the process if the property owner feels their assessment is inaccurate. The informal hearings will take place in November and December 2016. All property owners will receive then another assessment notice in early 2017 before the Board of Assessment Appeals process begins. This process allows owners to formally appeal their assessment if they feel it is incorrect.

Most revaluations typically result in a shift in the tax burden between commercial and residential real estate, and some shift within those categories as well. The main purpose of a revaluation is to correct inequalities in the tax burden that have developed due to the real estate market since the last revaluation. The total amount of taxes the Town needs to collect will be the same regardless of whether or not a revaluation takes place. What changes after a revaluation is the amount of taxes individual taxpayers pay towards the total, not the total amount of taxes paid by everyone.

The next-scheduled revaluation after the 2016 revaluation will be in 2021 pursuant to current statutes.

RESIDENCY POLICY AND NON-RESIDENT REGISTRATION

Participants must be Manchester residents and proof of residency is required upon registration, unless otherwise noted. A resident is defined as a person who permanently resides in the Town of Manchester. Non-residents may only register for programs that indicate nr-(non-resident fee) next to the listed fee.

PROGRAM ENROLLMENT POLICY

Enrollment is limited and most programs are based on a first come, first serve basis. The Recreation Division reserves the right to cancel or close a program which does not meet minimum enrollment requirements.

REFUND POLICY

Full refunds will be made if a request is made at least one week prior to the start of the program or if the Recreation Division cancels the class. Partial refunds will be made on a pro-rated basis, based on the date of notification, only in the first half of the programs duration. Refunds will not be considered once classes are half over or after the program ends.

PRO-RATING FEES FOR LATE REGISTRATION

Late registration will be accepted for most programs if space permits. Programs will be pro-rated up to 50% at or after the programs mid-point. Registration taken prior to the programs mid-point will be charged full price.

CONFIRMATION RECEIPT

A confirmation receipt of your registration will be mailed for mail and fax registrants only. On-line registrants should print out their receipt and walk-in registrants will receive a printed receipt upon registration. Program information will also be included on this form.

WAITING LIST

If your desired class is filled, you will be placed on a waiting list and your money will be returned. You will be notified by our department if openings become available.

DON'T BE DISAPPOINTED! REGISTER EARLY!

Unfortunately, we are sometimes forced to cancel programs two to three days prior to the start of the class because of under-enrollment. Or there are times when you wait too long to register and your class fills. Don't be disappointed! Register Early!
